On the red carpet of the Wonka premier, Timothée Chalamet debuted another feat of creativity: a Cartier necklace, developed by the Maison's Jewellery ateliers, with the artistic input of the Cartier ambassador

CARTIER

ONE-OFF PIECE

The exceptional creation was realised for Timothée Chalamet following his encounter with Marie-Laure Cérède, Cartier's Creative Director of Jewellery and Watchmaking. They met at the Maison's Jewellery ateliers in the heart of Paris, where Chalamet was immersed in the house's savoir-faire, and the duo shared their sources of inspiration and creative visions for the piece, including a series of film stills submitted by Chalamet. The design studios and Parisian ateliers worked together to create this one-off piece, while also considering the distinctive style and character of this longstanding Maison ambassador. Fitted precisely to Chalamet in the ateliers, so that the design sits directly on the skin, the white gold structure is scattershot with rotating precious stones: a combination of onyx, opals, tourmalines and emeralds in bright, enticing nuances of colour. Following its red-carpet appearance, the necklace took its place in the Cartier Collection, where it is available to travel around the globe for presentation to the public through relevant exhibitions.
